

Fairbanks Under Acres of Flood Water

ALMOST COVERED by rampaging water of the Chena River, Fairbanks presented this view yesterday to Bureau of Land Management photographer Robert Olendorff, of Anchorage, who made this remarkable aerial photograph of the flooded Interior Alaska city. At upper left, on what appears to be a small island in a bend of the river channel, are the flooded A-67 Exposition grounds. The downtown area is in the portion of the photograph just right of center, where the river channel dips toward the bottom of the picture. Alaska Communications Service headquarters, location of the single telephone link between Fairbanks and the outside, is just to the right of a circular building near right center. The Polaris and Northward buildings are at upper right center. A new multi-million-dollar J. C. Penney's store, opened about one month ago, is the large, white appearing building in the downtown area.

(Bureau of Land Management photo)

The Flood—Inside

Interviews with refugees arriving here from Fairbanks and the flooded lowlands near the Chena River, the dramatic stories of people touched directly by the damaging floods, appear on page 3 of today's Daily News.

Additional flood photographs and stories are on pages 6 and 7.

The Daily News sent reporters Ed Isenson and Roy Blackwood to the flood area yesterday, to join staff members Janet Archibald and Robin Smith, who went there Monday.

ANCHORAGE

Member Associated Press

Daily News

Alaska's Only Morning Newspaper

VOL. XXI, NO. 91

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 16, 1967

16 PAGES PRICE TEN CENTS

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Too Costly